In 2001, a group of local ministers started what would become Shepherd’s Crossing, an ecumenical nonprofit organization that provides compassionate assistance to those in need of a listening ear and financial support. Shepherd’s Crossing offers budget counseling, referrals and financial support for rent, utility and prescription medications to low-income families with financial emergencies. People from all walks of life are welcome, regardless of religious affiliation.

Volunteers contribute nearly 3,000 hours annually, most of which is devoted to counseling clients in money management. First United Methodist Church provides rent-free facilities. In 2017, Shepherd’s Crossing assisted 1,186 households with $254,600. Each year 30-plus churches, dozens of civic groups, and hundreds of businesses and individuals support this ministry.

In September 2012, Kansas State University’s College of Business Administration recognized its 50th anniversary by hosting the inaugural C. Clyde Run/Fun Run and Walk. It was named after the college’s first dean, C. Clyde Jones, a tireless community volunteer. Business students organize this community event. All event proceeds benefit Shepherd’s Crossing, the nonprofit Jones helped get off the ground. Each year, the event raises more than $30,000.

Midge’s Mile
In 2016, Midge’s Mile took on added significance. Clyde’s beloved wife, Midge, passed away on May 1, just six weeks short of 68 years of marriage. Her birthday falls on Nov. 2, creating an opportunity to celebrate her life with this special event.
